

Word of the Day

By Colby Wright

Most days in Language Arts, we have a word of the day. When we come into class, there is a word on the board, which we have to describe. Some kids don't automatically describe the word at the beginning of class, however by the end of class we all have a better understanding after we have discussed the word.

Some of the words we have discussed are very deceiving in the way that we use them or think they are used. Deception is one of the words that I didn't know until we talked about it. In the world today deception is used a lot on T.V. and when I heard this it made me think if I had ever been deceived before.

Another word was reputation. Before we talked about it I thought that reputation was just cool and not cool. But I found out that reputation is more than just that. I also thought that a reputation was something that you could only get at school. It can be at home and at school, or anywhere you happen to be with the people you are with.

We also talked about the word assume. Assume to me, when I thought about it made me think of the saying people use to explain the word "assume". I really didn't know what it meant. Then I found that it can mean expecting and to predict something or to make a guess of something that is the in near future.

So this is what word of the day is and some of the words that we discussed. I think words of the day are a good thing, because you learn a lot of different words and what other kids think of the words.
